

India – actively supporting international terrorism

By our Chairman of European Section, Dr. Amar Clodo

Unfortunately it has been proven that India ¹has been and still is actively supporting terrorism² and carrying out terrorism acts and "economic sabotage" in various countries like Pakistan³ and Sri Lanka⁴

India's Research and Analysis Wing (RAW India's infamous and notorious primary foreign intelligence agency) has been training and arming the Sri Lankan Tamil group, LTTE, which was considered a terrorist organization. The LTTE continued to operate freely and continued to have links with RAW until the defeat of the LTTE in 2009.^{5,6} From August 1983 to May 1987, India, through its intelligence agency Research and Analysis Wing (RAW), provided arms, training and monetary support to six Sri Lankan Tamil insurgent groups including the LTTE. During that period, 32 terror training camps were set up in India to train these 495 LTTE insurgents⁷including 90 women who were trained in 10 batches.⁸ The first batch of Tigers were trained in Establishment 22 based in Chakrata, Uttarakhand. The second batch, including LTTE intelligence chief Pottu Amman⁹ trained in Himachal Pradesh. Prabakaran visited the first and the second batch of Tamil Tigers to see them training. Eight other batches of LTTE were trained in Tamil Nadu. Thenmozhi Rajaratnam alias Dhanu, who carried out the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi and Sivarasam—the key conspirator were among the militants trained by RAW, in Nainital, India¹⁰ In April 1984, the LTTE formally joined a common militant front, the Eelam National Liberation Front (ENLF), a union between LTTE, the Tamil Eelam Liberation Organization (TELO), the Eelam Revolutionary Organisation of Students (EROS), the People's Liberation Organisation of Tamil Eelam (PLOTE) and the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front (EPRLF). These Indian trained groups later carried out some of the most devastating terrorist attacks in Sri Lanka. ¹¹

Pakistani Government has proven that Indian consulates in Kandahar and Jalalabad, Afghanistan, were providing arms, training and financial aid to the Balochistan Liberation Army (BLA) in an attempt to destabilize Pakistan. ^{12 13} Brahamdagh Bugti stated in a 2008 interview that he would accept help from India. ¹⁴ Pakistan has repeatedly accused India of supporting Baloch rebels, ¹⁵ and Wright-Neville writes that outside Pakistan, also Western observers strongly believe that India secretly funds the BLA ¹⁶. In August 2013 US Special Representative James Dobbins said Pakistan's fears over India's role in Afghanistan were "not groundless". ¹⁷

A diplomatic cable sent on December 31, 2009, from the U.S. consulate in Karachi and obtained by WikiLeaks said it was sure that Indian intelligence was helping the Baluch insurgents. An earlier 2008 cable, discussing the Mumbai attacks reported fears by British officials that "intense domestic pressure would force Delhi to respond, at the minimum, by ramping up covert support to nationalist insurgents fighting the Pakistani army in Baluchistan." ¹⁸ Another cable dating back to 2009 showed that UAE officials believed India was secretly supporting Tehreek-e-Taliban insurgents and separatists in northwest Pakistan ¹⁹ with the sole purpose of destabilizing one of the few real democracies in this area.

After the June 2017 Pakistan bombings, Anwarul Haq Kakar, a Baluchistan government spokesman, said India had a role in the attack in Quetta. ^{20 21}
